LOCAL AREA

Roden Court is situated on a beautiful tree-lined, wide pavement road between Highgate Village and Crouch End in the north London borough of Haringey.

It is perfectly located to benefit from both areas, which boast an abundance of attractive architecture, restaurants and coffee shops, lively shopping streets, transport links and leafy parks.

The Crouch End Clock Tower was erected in 1895 by the architect Frederick Knight, in 'appreciation and recognition of the public services' of Henry Reader Williams.

The tower is sited at the heart of Crouch End, at the point where the Broadway splits into Park Road and Tottenham Lane, and where once a wooden cross stood.

Today, Crouch End is often described as a little urban village. It is a lively multi-cultural neighbourhood with a strong sense of community and history.
